A Parallel between the celebrated Don Quixot and Furioso the modern Patriot.

THE Itch of Politicks is properly an Engliſh Diſeaſe; we are tainted with it from our Cradles, we receive it from our Parents, we catch it from our Acquaintance, and intail it upon our Children; all Qualities and Degrees, Ages, Sexes, and Conditions are infected, and the Diſtemper ſeems too inveterate to be cur'd.——The Spaniards, in the Time of the inimitable Cervantes, were not more fantaſtically fond of Chivalry, than we of Politicks, or perſued it to a more extravagant Pitch of Abſurdity and Ridicule: To ſee one Man neglect his Fortune and his Family in hunting after News, in waiting with Impatience for every freſh Mail from abroad, or every new Revolution at home; to ſee another debating, with as much Paſſion as if his Life or Honour was invaded, on ſome State Point that he could never underſtand, and a third ſacrificing his Friend to ſome political Chimera that was of no Importance to either; to ſee Men employ'd in ſo whimſical and ſo trifling a Manner is at once a Subject for Pity and Ridicule; 'tis one of thoſe Odneſſes that divides the Heart between Mirth and Tenderneſs, and a good-natur'd impartial Man would hardly know which to indulge firſt.——The Upholſterer in the Tatler is one of the moſt humourous Characters that ever was drawn, and the beſt calculated for the Service of the Engliſh People; 'twas giving a Body to the many-headed Monſter, and bidding us view our Likeneſs.——But what was the Conſequence? every one confeſs'd 'twas the Reſemblance of moſt of his Acquaintance, but no one was wiſe, or ingenuous enough to diſcern, or acknowledge it for his own; all Perſons were entertain'd at the ludicrous Picture, but none were reform'd by the Satire it convey'd: Hence the Contagion continued as ſtrong as ever, Men caught it of each other, and, like a certain Monarch of the laſt Century, bleſt the Diſeaſe that afforded them ſuch agreeable Senſations.——Neither is it the Humour of one particular Age only, it deſcends from Generation to Generation; every new Oppoſition at Court creates a new Party in the People, and Cabal ſucceeds Cabal in blind Submiſſion to their Leaders.——The State is not able to provide for all that have the Vanity to think themſelves qualified for its Service; thoſe who are diſappointed immediately have Recourſe to Popularity, and appeal from Majeſty to the People: The Method to do this is to complain of Grievances, no Matter whether real or imaginary; we are always jealous of Perſons in Power, and take Pains with ourſelves to believe them Guilty, merely becauſe they are Great. Nothing is more eaſy than to acquire ſuch a Reputation; our Paſſions are ſure to be heard at all Times, and thoſe who will flatter them are ſure of our Favour; this is the grand Art of Patriotiſm, and the laſt Reſource of diſappointed Ambition.——No longer retain'd by the Monarch, they become Knights-Errant for the People, diſplay the Banner of Faction, and ſound the Charge of Sedition againſt the Peace of their Country: Succeſſive Revolutions produce a Succeſſion of theſe Monſter-fighting Patriots, and I believe England has never been without a Champion or two at her Command Time immemorial: At leaſt there have been always ſuch who have ſtil'd themſelves ſo, who have arm'd themſelves Cap-a-pe with invincible Aſſurance, pretended the Common-wealth was their Miſtreſs, and denounc'd War and Battle to all Gain-Sayers.

I have been frequently tempted to believe that Cervantes copied his Quixot from ſome ſuch Character in his own Times, or, unfortunately it ſuits ſo perfectly with thoſe of ours, that, if 'twas not a Copy of any one before it, 'twas a Type of what was to come.——Whoever is acquainted with the Character of that heroical Madman, will eaſily believe me, but, to ſave them the Trouble of drawing the Parallel, I'll undertake it myſelf, and venture for once on a Species of Writing that is copied from the celebrated Caleb D'Anvers.

Don Quixot is repreſented in the Beginning as a good, honeſt, peaceable Man, who liv'd quietly among his Country Neighbours; and our political Furioſo did the ſame. Don Quixot's firſt Sally was owing to his Ambition of Knighthood; and the Magnanimity of our preſent Champion ariſes intirely from a like Emulation. Don Quixot openly avow'd himſelf a Redreſſor of Wrongs; our Hero makes that Declaration as boldly as he: The Spaniard frequently did the greateſt Miſchiefs where he intended the moſt Service; the Briton as often does Miſchief, but without intending any Service at all: This Circumſtance indeed a little diſconcerts our Parallel, but, as 'tis Truth, we are oblig'd to inſert it notwithſtanding: Don Quixot had an admirable Talent of making Monſters and Giants, if he could find none ready made to his Hand; our modern Furioſo does the ſame to a Miracle, and deſtroys them as eaſily: The firſt by Accident was ſometimes guilty of a good Office, and then made the Merit of it his own; the laſt is as much oblig'd to Accident as he, and to the full as vain in becoming the Herald to his own Applauſe: Cervantes's Hero was ridiculous even in Misfortune, and Men were tempted rather to laugh than pity; ours is to the full as unhappy, and as compleatly ridiculous: Don Quixot was always made the Fool of the Farce even by his beſt Friends; our Knight-Errant is dup'd in the ſame Manner, and thinks himſelf happieſt when he is moſt abus'd: The Spaniard was proud in his Behaviour, and raſh in his Undertakings; the Briton is characteris'd in the ſame Manner, and is known as well by his Eminences both Ways as by his Name.——Don Quixot talk'd admirably on all Subjects but Chivalry, that was the String of Diſcord which untun'd his Mind and diſcover'd the Defect in his Underſtanding; Politicks is as fatal to the Britiſh Furioſo, the very naming a Prime Miniſter throws him into an Extaſy, and, while the Fit's upon him, he perfectly foams with the Fury of his Diſtemper: Don Quixot ſeems to be an unhappy, miſtaken Man; our Hero appears to have more Malice than Simplicity, tho' much may be ſaid on both Sides.——Both theſe unfortunate Worthies were plagu'd with certain Enchanters, their profeſs'd Enemies that wrought them abundance of Woe; Don Quixot was betray'd into numberleſs Evils by them, ſuch as Blows, Falls, Bruiſes, Faſtings, Penances, and Diſgraces. His Counter-Part has ſuffer'd as much by Free Britons, London Journals, Remarks, and a certain Stroke of a Pen that ſtript him of all his Honours at once.——Their Characters, 'tis true, differ in ſome Points; Don Quixot was a Man of moſt religious Principle, and would not have betray'd a Converſation or ſacrific'd his Friend for an Empire; our Champion has unhappily done both, and ruin'd his Fame in Complement to his Reſentment.——However, I would have him conſider'd as in one of his Deliriums at that Conjuncture, and what a Man does, when he is beſide himſelf, may be the more eaſily pardon'd.——Don Quixot ended one of his Adventures in a Cage, but I preſume our Hero will have more Wit than to follow his Example, to make the Parallel compleat.——To ſet aſide Metaphor and Allegory, the Publick has long been miſled by Perſons who have pretended to be intirely devoted to its Intereſt, but, in Fact, have only perſued their own; who have endeavour'd to make Popularity the Ladder of their Ambition, and Patriotiſm the Means to raiſe it; but, if the People underſtand any Thing of the Politicks they are ſo fond of, they can be deceiv'd no longer: During the Progreſs of the late Controverſy ſuch Facts have been clear'd up, ſuch a ſtrong Defence of the Adminiſtration has appear'd in the Free Briton on one Side, ſuch manifeſt Marks of Diſaffection and Revenge in the Craftſman on the other, that no impartial Man can be one Moment at a Loſs to determine in Favour of that Miniſtry, which, ſo often inſulted, has ſo often forgiven, ſo injuriouſly accus'd is ſo effectually juſtified, ſo greatly embaraſs'd has ſo perfectly diſincumber'd itſelf, and, at laſt, is riſen ſuperior to the utmoſt Malice of its Enemies both abroad and at home.——Such is the Force of Integrity and Virtue, of Steadineſs and Reſolution, of Wiſdom and Forbearance; ſuch is the Greatneſs of his Genius, and the Goodneſs of his Heart, who has ſo long unjuſtly ſuffer'd the Rage of Calumny, when he had the Power to avenge it, and was ſo falſly repreſented as an Enemy to his Country, when his whole Life was devoted to its Service.

The Beau; an Ode.

HAPPY the Man! thrice happy he!
Whoſe higheſt Joy's a ſmart Toupee;
Whoſe Pleaſure varies with the Mode,
Who bows to Faſhion as a God;
Whoſe Boſom, arm'd in rich Brocade,
Rebukes its Woes, and is obey'd.
See from his Chair the Idol riſe!
The rude Wind blows, the Powder flies!
To ev'ry Fair he turns his Eye,
The Fair are wounded, ſigh, and die;
The Fair are wounded, he ſurvives——
'Tis for himſelf he only lives.
Sneer on ye formal Grave and Wiſe!
Still Pomp and Dreſs and Courts deſpiſe!
Still drudge for Wiſdom in the Schools!
And live by frozen Virtue's Rules!
The Sparkle of a female Eye
Outſhines your beſt Philoſophy.
Hail charming Pow'r of Self-Opinion!
For none are Slaves in thy Dominion;
Secure in thee the Soul's at eaſe;
The Vain have only one to pleaſe:
What more's in Truth or Wiſdom ſeen?
They have but Happineſs within!

Continuation of the Tale of Conſtant and Fidelia, or Virtue rewarded; begun in our laſt.

CONSTANT ended with Tears, and Fidelia, who was not prepar'd for ſo unexpected a Misfortune, ſwoon'd away at the Diſcovery; but, reviv'd by the Care and Tenderneſs of her Lover, and weeping like the Dews of the Morning, with a Heart over-laden with Sorrow, ſhe thus replied, "Your Generoſity covers me with Confuſion, your Tenderneſs has waken'd all my former Calamities, open'd every Wound that Diſtreſs has made in my Boſom, and I feel them bleed anew.——Was it not enough that Grief had made me the continued Mark for her keeneſt Arrows, but you muſt be involv'd in the ſame Ruin?——Fly, my Conſtant! fly from ſo fatal an Acquaintance, and be at Peace.——Peace and I were always Strangers, and, if I can't find her in your Company, I deſpair of ever finding her at all.——You ſee Miſery is contagious; when you deſcended to ſuccour me, you caught the Diſeaſe yourſelf, and are like to bewail it for ever.——Don't give me the inſupportable Pain of being the Inſtrument of your Unhappineſs; I could endure my own becauſe 'twas the Hand of Heaven inflicted it; but yours——yours is a Wound to my Spirit which I am utterly unable to bear."——Conſtant would not let her proceed, but, ſtraining her tenderly in his Arms, and ſmiling in Sorrow as a Rainbow beautifies a Cloud, "Don't be anxious for me, my Charmer! (ſays he) I ſhall feel no Pain but Abſence, regret no Loſs but your Company; 'tis true, Life, without you, can afford me no Pleaſure, but I'll be ingenious in ſeeking my own Repoſe; when Abſence has waſted but little Time, I'll whiſper to my Heart that 'twas not long ſince I ſaw the deareſt Object of its Deſires; when that Comfort fails me, and Love has number'd out an Age, I'll flatter myſelf that I am ſo much the nearer to you and Happineſs: Call it not a Misfortune that Riches are deny'd me, and that my Youth muſt toil for what my Age can't enjoy; in Misfortune I ſhall learn that Virtue which Riches is a Stranger to, and extricate myſelf from a Snare that probably had been my Bane: Perſuade me not to forſake you for ſo contemptible a Cauſe; you ſhall be Riches, Pleaſure, Fame, and Health to me, the Point that unites them all, and all united in my Favour."——Fidelia was charm'd with his Nobleneſs and Magnanimity, and fully believ'd the Paſſion of ſuch a Man an ample Atonement for all her Sufferings: She now no longer oppos'd his Reſolution, and only conceal'd the Sorrow ſhe could not prevent; ſhe concluded ſo much Virtue had a Title to the Regard of Providence, and contented herſelf with Praying for his Safety.——In the mean Time her Lover prepar'd for a Voyage to the Levant, and intirely forgot his paſt Loſs in the Proſpect of future Gain.——All Things were now ready for his Departure, the Wind fair, the Ship ready; he had only a Moment left for taking Leave of his Fidelia, a Moment for what requir'd a Year, and even that had been waſted in Sighs and Tears in vain.—They met; ſhe look'd an inexpreſſible Sorrow, but could not ſpeak; he affected a Chearfulneſs that was foreign to his Heart, and, when he would have comforted her, wept for himſelf; Exceſs of Sorrow diſdain'd the Help of Words, and Silence was eloquent where Speech was vain: 'Twas the Rack of Miſery on both Sides, and what one felt explain'd the Anguiſh of the other.——At laſt, being oblig'd to part, after a long Embrace, Conſtant groan'd out Adieu. Adieu! anſwers Fidelia, ſeeming only an Echo to his Woe, and fainted while ſhe ſpoke, as if Death had waited only for that Signal, and, to part with Conſtant was to die indeed.——

When the Lover was embark'd, and the Lady left alone to ruminate on her Fortune, ſhe reſolv'd to make herſelf a voluntary Recluſe from the World and its taſteleſs Vanities; that ſhe might weary Heaven with Prayers for Conſtant's Preſervation, that ſhe might live over in Idea the Scenes of honeſt Tenderneſs that had paſſed between them, and indulge the pleaſing Expectation of hearing from him as often as the Winds and Waves would give Leave: But how great was her Diſappointment, when Month after Month, and Season after Season paſſed away without the leaſt News of her Lover, or his Fate? Always apprehenſive of the worſt, and impatient of the Delay, ſhe gave a Looſe to Sorrow and Deſpair, concluded that Heaven had pointed her out to endure its whole Vengeance, and became an habitual Mourner: The Morning, Evening, Noon and Mid-night were waſted with Complainings, or bedew'd with Tears; ſhe expoſtulated with Sorrow, and made herſelf a Companion to Adverſity, Patience forſook her, and Conſolation pleaded to mitigate her Diſtreſs in vain.

During this melancholly Situation of Fidelia's, her late Duenna made herſelf perfectly acquainted with every Tittle of her Fortune, and, ſtill reſolving to be more effectually reveng'd for the Diſappointment ſhe had occaſion'd her, laid a Plot on the little Proviſion Conſtant was able to leave for her Support, that ſhe might be again reduc'd to her original Extremity, and liable to fall into a like Snare. For this End ſhe procures one of her truſty Emiſſaries to perſonate a Country Gentleman, of a pretty good Fortune, who wanted to raiſe 500l. to redeem himſelf from ſome occaſional Diſtreſs, and would give a reaſonable Intereſt, and ſufficient Security; with this Tale ſhe found Ways and Means to introduce him to the artleſs abandon'd Fidelia, who heard him with Concern, thought it her Duty to relieve him ſince 'twas no Injury to herſelf, truſted to his imaginary Mortgage, and loſt her all irretrievably.——The Duenna and her Agent divided the Spoils of Innocence and Virtue, and contriv'd new Schemes for her farther Undoing.

Fidelia was not long in diſcovering her Misfortune, nor inſenſible of the Dangers and Miſeries it expos'd her to; but, having loſt her Conſtant, all other Accidents were become indifferent to her, and, inſtead of lamenting, ſhe endeavour'd, in the beſt Manner ſhe could, to remedy the Conſequences of ſo fatal an Affair.

In the Interval her Duenna informs an ancient Baronet, who had ſpent his whole Life in a Purſuit of illegal Pleaſure, of her Beauty and Diſtreſs; even exaggerates the Deſcription of both to make him more fond of the Conqueſt, and convince him of the Eaſe of ſecuring it to himſelf; the old Gentleman took Fire at the Relation, and gives her a ſuitable Bribe for her Intelligence and future good Offices; then conſults in earneſt to put his Deſigns in Practice.——Hearing ſhe ſtill continued in her Retreat, in a beautiful Village near the Town, he removes thither under the Pretence of the Benefit of the Air, and takes Apartments in the very Houſe where ſhe liv'd; inquires careleſly who lodg'd there beſide himſelf, and, being made acquainted with Fidelia's Story a ſecond Time, pretends an uncommon Concern for her, and drops ſome Hints of his Intentions to relieve her.——Makes her an handſome Compliment of his Table, and at firſt diſcovers no other Motive but common Compaſſion, and the Generoſity that ſhould be inſeparable from the Character of a Gentleman.——Thinking herſelf ſecure in his Age and Gravity, Fidelia modeſtly accepts his Offer as frequently as Decency, and her own inconſolable Grief would give her Leave; enchants him with Beauty corrected by Modeſty, and entertains him with good Senſe, void of Affectation.——Struck with ſo near a View of ſuch inimitable Charms, the hoary Knight took an Opportunity of revealing his Paſſion, and offer'd Mountains of Gold to make it agreeable; but was repuls'd with the ſevereſt Diſdain, and reprov'd as ſeverely for his Inſolence in attempting it.——Doubly enamour'd now with her Virtue as well as her Beauty, he looks upon her as the Glory of her Sex, as the only Woman that had Happineſs in her Diſpoſal; admires as well as loves, and reſolves to marry her ſince ſhe was to be won no other Way.——He makes his Propoſals accordingly, talks of Settlements, Grandeur, and Titles, and eſteems himſelf ſure of a Woman's Compliance on ſuch magnificent Terms.——But Fidelia was caſt in another Mould, ſhe was as much above Falſhood as Diſhonour, and rejected both him and his Fortunes in Favour of her firſt Vow, in ſtricteſt Regard to the tendereſt Paſſions of her own Boſom, in dear Remembrance of her loſt, unhappy, wandring Conſtant.—Confounded at her Refuſal, and diſtracted to enjoy her, the Knight has Recourſe to the Duenna a-new, tells her what Steps he had taken, and with what ill Succeſs; conjures her to furniſh him with ſome new Scheme, and bids her chuſe her Reward.——Ready for Miſchief, and eager for Gain, ſhe directs him to counterfeit a Letter as from abroad, wherein a particular Account is given of Conſtant's periſhing in a Storm, together with the whole Ship's Company; the Writer of the Letter is made a Spectator of his Fate, and the whole is inforc'd with ſuch probable Circumſtances of Truth, as left no room for Doubt and Uncertainty.——This ended, the doating Lover hurries hence to Fidelia, and delivers the fatal Letter as from one who had by Accident receiv'd the Information, at the ſame Time lamenting that he himſelf was forc'd to be the diſagreeable Meſſenger, and tenderly condoling with her on ſo keen a Misfortune.——She heard the News as what ſhe had long expected, as what ſhe had been us'd to fear; a ſullen Sorrow took Poſſeſſion of her Heart too mighty for Relief, and too exquiſite for Complaint; ſhe immediately ſhut herſelf up from all Company, and waſted more than a Year in Solitude and Deſpair; but Want and Miſery of every Kind approaching her daily and hourly, ſollicited continually by the Knight, and utterly depriv'd of the Poſſibility of ſeeing her dear Lover any more, ſhe was dragg'd by cruel Conſtraint to the Altar, and ſolemniz'd the Nuptials with her Tears that were due to the Memory of the unfortunate Conſtant.

[To be concluded in our next.]

SATURDAY, September 18.

ON Tueſday laſt the Lord Delaware collected 80l. in Buſhy-Park for the Huntſmen: The three eldeſt Princeſſes gave 10l. apiece, and the Duke and the Princeſs Mary 5l. each; and the reſt was given by the Nobility and Quality who partake of that Diverſion. The next Day the King and Queen ſent each 50 Guineas, and his Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales 30 Guineas to the Huntſmen.

Yeſterday a Man well dreſs'd dropt down dead of a Fit of an Appoplexy, in Broad-ſtreet, near the Church.

The ſame Morning, between Four and Five, a young Woman jump'd into the Canal in Hyde-Park, and was drowned.

We are well aſſured, the Account publiſh'd in ſeveral of the News Papers, about the Death of Margaret Whiſtle, who died in St. Giles's Work-houſe is entirely falſe, which plainly appears from the Certificate ſign'd upon Oath by two Doctors, three Surgeons, and an Apothecary.

Robberies. Laſt Wedneſday Night, Mr. Roberts, a Hatter in Barnaby-ſtreet, Southwark, was attack'd by two Footpads near the Half-way Houſe between Deptford and Greenwich, who took from him 18s. and ſome Half-pence, and made off.——Laſt Thurſday Night about Ten o'Clock, a Gentleman belonging to his Majeſty's Kitchen was ſtopped between Hampton-Court and Hampton-Town, by two Footpads, who robbed him of his Coat and Waiſtcoat, a Watch, and ſome Money, and made off, but were perſued, and one of them was apprehended at Shipperton.

Death. Laſt Wedneſday died in Eſſex-ſtreet in the Strand, Mr. Eagar, a Gentleman of good Fortune.

Shipping. By Letters dated the 9th of December laſt from Perſia, we are informed, that the Storm they had in September laſt had done very conſiderable Damages, there being five Portugueſe Ships arrived at Goa, who all loſt their Maſts; and one large Ship, in which the Portugueſe Admiral was in with a Number of Forces, was miſſing; and that there were five Ships loſt between Bombay and Perſia. They alſo adviſe us, that the Turks having got before Iſpahan, the Perſians were very much involved, and their Affairs ſeemed to have a bad Aſpect. And that at Surat they were very much infeſted with the Gwenins, who ſtop even Proviſions from coming into the Town; and indeed Proviſions of all Kind are at an extravagant Price in Perſia.

MONDAY, September 20.

Hampton-Court, September 13. By an Expreſs which arrived this Day from Mr. Colman, his Majeſty's Miniſter Plenipotentiary at the Court of Parma, dated the 15th Inſtant, N. S. we have Advice, that the Ducheſs Dowager Henrietta of Parma having declared that the Symptoms which had given Reaſon to believe that ſhe was pregnant, were ceaſed, and that ſhe is not with Child, General Stampa, the Imperial Commiſſary and Plenipotentiary, did on the 14th take Poſſeſſion of the Duchies of Parma and Placentia, in the Name of the Infant of Spain Don Carlos; an Imperial Notary, accompany'd by the proper Officers, reading the Edict publiſh'd for that Purpoſe in the Balcony of the Houſe of the Governor of Parma, which is ſituated in the great Place of that Town, where ſome Troops of Horſe and Companies of Foot were drawn up, great Numbers of the Inhabitants being preſent at that Solemnity. The General alſo wrote a Letter the ſame Day to the Tribunals of Parma and Placentia, acquainting them therewith, and requiring the ſeveral Magiſtrates to continue to diſcharge their reſpective Offices till farther Orders.

On Saturday a Perſon ran from the White-Hart Alehouſe in Gracechurch-ſtreet to the Top of the Monument, and back again, in five Minutes, for a conſiderable Wager, he having ſix and a half allow'd him to do it in.

On Friday Night a Son of Mr. Elms, a Woolen-draper in the Piazza, Covent-Garden, being diſorder'd in his Senſes, ſhot himſelf through the Head, ſo that he died on the Spot.

The Confeſſion of John Naden, while under Sentence of Death for the Murder of Robert Brough, made the 27th of Auguſt, 1731, in Stafford Goal, who was hang'd in Chains the 31ſt of Auguſt on the higheſt Hill on Gun-Heath, (within a Quarter of a Mile of his Maſter's Houſe) near Leek in Staffordſhire.

I John Naden do confeſs (not having the Fear of God before my Eyes, but ſpurr'd on by the Inſtigation of the Devil) that I am guilty of the Murder of my Maſter, Robert Brough, by cutting my ſaid Maſter's Throat with his own Knife. I cannot reflect upon the abominable Fact but with the greateſt Horror and Abhorrence, and therefore muſt own the Juſtice of my Sentence, and willingly ſubmitting myſelf to undergo the ſame, hoping by a ſincere Repentance for Pardon and Remiſſion of this moſt heinous Sin, and all other my grievous Sins, thro' the Merits of my dear Redeemer Jeſus Chriſt.

Now what prompted me to this moſt wicked Fact was that unlawful Familiarity I had with my Miſtreſs, the Wife of my ſaid Maſter, Robert Brough: I had never attempted ſuch Familiarity, had not ſhe made me firſt Offers of the ſame. Soon after this, about three or four Years ago, ſhe gave me a Ring, and expreſs'd her Love to me, and ſaid, if any Thing happen'd to my Maſter, ſhe ſhould be very happy with me. In the Procedure of our Acquaintance, ſhe continued often making ſuch like Profeſſions; but towards the laſt ſhe ſollicited me to murder him, or to have him murder'd, adding, that if I would not do it, ſhe would have it done. After her frequent Perſuaſions to this bloody Fact, I went out from her to meet my Maſter, about a Fortnight before he was murder'd, in his Return from Congleton-Market; but being then diſappointed, at my coming home ſhe expreſs'd a great deal of Anger, and asked me why I had not done it, meaning, why I had not murder'd him my ſaid Maſter. Upon the Morning of that fatal Day whereon the Murder was committed, I enjoy'd my Miſtreſs twice, and then concluded with her to murder my Maſter, he my ſaid Maſter having determined to part with me from his Service: I accordingly follow'd him to Leek, and in his Return home, I being much heated with Liquor, did way-lay him, and did alſo take away his Life, as before. Soon after, I came to my Maſter's Houſe, and in a little Time acquainted my Miſtreſs with what I had done: Afterwards, when the Family was gone to Bed, ſhe went out to the Place where my Maſter lay murder'd, rifled his Pockets, and threw the Knife (the unfortunate Inſtrument wherewith I committed the Murder) over the Hedge. She my ſaid Miſtreſs call'd me up about Three o'Clock in the Morning, and told me this; and bid me ſay that I ſaw William Wardle, an innocent Perſon, do the Murder: By her wicked Perſuaſions, I accuſed the ſaid Wardle upon Oath, for which enormous Crime I heartily beg Pardon, and wiſh it was in my Power to make him Satisfaction: In the mean Time I beg Forgiveneſs from all I have injured, and do declare and ſolemnly affirm this my Confeſſion to be true, as I am a dying Man, and expect in a few Days to appear before the Tribunal of the great God of Heaven; as Witneſs my Hand this 27th Day of Auguſt, 1731.

JOHN NADEN.

Mrs. Brough, the Widow of the Perſon murder'd, is now in Stafford-Goal, in order to be try'd for the ſaid Fact.

We learn from Chichester, that the Corpse of Dr. Waddington, their late Bishop, was interr'd in the Cathedral there on Friday Night last, and that it was the most mournful Funeral that had been seen, almost the whole City being in Tears, on Account of his extensive Hospitality, Charity, and Beneficence; and that his Loss, with Regard to the Poor in particular, is irreparable.

On Sunday Night last about Nine o'Clock, a Fire happen'd at the King's-Arms Inn at Tetsworth in Oxfordshire, which consumed the said House and Stables and all the Out-Houses, there being only one Stack of Hay saved: The Damage is computed at 1500l.

They write from the Hague, that a Treaty of Union and Defensive Alliance (for three Years) between the Electorates of Hanover and Saxony, was sign'd at Dresden the 3d Inst. and the Troops belonging to them both are to act in Confederacy.

Robberies, &c. On Sunday Night last the Dwelling-house of John Meard, Esq; one of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace for Westminster, was broke open and robb'd of several Things to a considerable Value.——On Monday Night a Gentleman was robb'd between Ten and Eleven o'Clock in King-street, Westminster, near the End of Dartmouth-street, by two Foot-pads, who took from him all his Money.——The same Afternoon, an Upholsterer's Lodgings in Little Queen-street, near Holbourn, was broke open, and Goods to the Value of 20l. were stolen.——On Saturday last Mr. Box, a Farmer at Cobham in Surrey, was robbed by two Foot-pads on Cobham-Heath: They took from him 7s. 3d. ½ being all the Money he had, with his Whip. They were taken about Eight o'Clock the same Night, and were committed to Kingston-Goal by Sir Francis Vincent.——Yesterday two Men were committed to Newgate by Justice Mitford, for a Street-Robbery.

Wednesday being the Day our Chamber annually make their Choice of a new Mayor, Arthur Taylor, Esq; was accordingly elected, for the Year ensuing, and Edward Cooper and William Barns, Esqrs; were elected Sheriffs.

THURSDAY, September 23.

Last Week the Wife of Counsellor Pink of Lincoln's-Inn, was brought to Bed of two Sons, at his Seat at Northall in Hertfordshire.

On Tuesday her Majesty, together with the Duke and the three eldest Princesses, made a Visit to Mrs. Simpson, whose Husband is one of the Keepers of Bushy-Park: She is 106 Years old, being born in the Town of Cardigan in the Year 1625, is now in good Health, and has all her Senses (except Hearing) perfect: Her Majesty, after being highly satisfy'd with the Account she gave of the Manner of her Living, by which she had preserved herself to this good Old Age, made her a Present of a small Purse of Gold.

A Benefaction hath been lately left to fix married Clergymen, of the Degree of Batchelor of Arts at least, and whose Promotions do not exceed 30l. per Ann. three in the Diocese of London, and three in the Diocese of Bath and Wells; to be at the Disposal of the Bishops of the respective Dioceses for the Time being.

Yesterday one Durel, a Tide-waiter, who was on Duty on board a Merchant Ship in the River near Wapping New-Stairs, had the Misfortune to tumble over-board, and was drown'd.

Last Tuesday Morning a Man was found dead, with a Garter about his Neck, tied to a Stump of a short Tree, in the Road leading from Knightsbridge to Chelsea. A Letter was found in his Pocket, in which he laid the Cause of his Misfortune to an unkind Uncle.

Yesterday one Haywood, a Labourer, who lately lived near the Horse-Ferry, Westminster, was run over by a Cart near St. Giles's-Pound, and died on the Spot.

Edinburgh, September 16. On Tuesday Evening last, between Six and Seven o'Clock, a most surprizing Fiery Meteor, of a Globular Figure, appeared to the Southward of this City, directing from South to North, which at last seemed to die away, and fall to the Ground in a blazing Train. This Morning Mr. Ayton, Deacon of the Goldsmiths, was by a great Majority chosen Conveener of all the Incorporations of this City.

Barbadoes, July 27. Since my last a melancholy Accident happen'd, on the Day the Frere, Capt. Richardson, sail'd hence for London, Capt. Podd (whose Owners are the same) went on board Capt. Richardson's Ship, with eight of his Sailors, to help him to get up his Anchors; they staid on board till the Ship had drove near two Leagues to Leeward, when they got into their Boat, with four young Men that were on board, taking leave of their Friends; about half Way to Shore the Boat overset, and Capt. Podd, the four young Men, viz. Capt. Warner's eldest Son, Moses Pacheco, young Gomez, and —— Valvaroe (three Jews) with one of the Sailors, were drowned; the rest were taken up by a Sloop, having saved themselves on the Bottom of the Boat.

Extract of a Letter from Cadiz, September 11. N. S.

On the 6th current arrived here the San Francisco and the San Bruno in 87 Days from Buenos Ayres, and 74 from Rio de la Plat: Their Cargoes are as follow, viz. 197,000 Pieces of Eight for the King, 700,000 Ditto for the Merchants, 16000lb. of fine Bezor Wool, 140 Teirces, containing 12000lb. of Jesuits Bark, 32000 Hides in Hair. These Ships were sent from hence about Christmas 1728, and have made a dismal Account: Merchandize being run into the Spanish Territories from Nova Colona, a Portuguese Settlement on the River of Plata, and from other Quarters, in such Quantities, that such as send Goods from hence, subject to so many Duties and Charges, must be ruin'd if they pursue the Trade: All English Manufactures are as cheap at Buenos Ayres as in this City. We see no Prospect of the speedy Delivery of the Flota and Assogues Treasure; but they have begun to deliver out the Cochineal and other Merchandizes. This new Addition of Treasure by the Register Ships is in the King's Custody, and when it will be delivered is as uncertain as that by the Flota and Assogues.

Extract of a Letter from Barcelona, September 16. N. S.

On the 14th Inst. Sir Charles Wager arrived here with twelve Sail of British Men of War from Gibraltar, and expects to be joined by the Hector and Kinsale Men of War. The Provisions, Cannon, and Train of Artillery are already imbark'd, and every Thing is in Order requisite to execute the Italian Expedition, except the Spanish Fleet, which is expected in a few Days. The Sea Nymph, Forster, from London, is now in this Port.

P. S. Just now five Spanish Men of War are arrived.

Extract of a Letter from Lisbon, September 16. N. S.

On the 10th arrived here Capt. Waller from the Western Islands, from whence we have Letters advising, that a Lute-stern'd Pink, Daniel Haley Master, was run away with from thence by her Crew. The Master and Portuguese were on Shore, when the Men on board cut her Cables, and such Men as were not inclined to Piracy they turn'd on Shoar at Angra; then hoisting British Colours, they fired a Gun, Shot and all, at the Castle, by Way of Defiance, and stood to Sea, having only seven Men in her. She had on board a Cargo of Sale Goods worth 20,000 Crusadoes.

At Fyall, in the Night of the 13th of August, they had a violent Storm, in which the Phœnix, from Cachew, was lost, and all the White Men and many Negroes were drowned, of the latter 37 out of 152 escaped: She had on board a considerable Quantity of Wax and Ivory, which was also lost: Capt. Gumbleton, and the Portuguese Captain who commanded her, with some others, were luckily on Shoar: This Loss falls principally on the Insurers in Holland. At the same Time was lost there a fine new Brig freighted from hence.

We have Letters from Rio de Janeiro, by Way of the Western Islands, wherein 'tis written, that a private Mint had been discovered in the Certam, between that City and the Mines, in which were seized in Bars and Dust 70 Roves, each 30lb. and a Million of Crusadoes in coined Money. They add, that it had been establish'd 10 Years; that above 40 Traders were concerned in it, and had made great Gain by it, as paying no Mintage or Coinage, for which Articles the Duty is very considerable.

Robbery, &c. On Tuesday in the Evening Mr. Wilcox, a Mate of a Ship at Blackwall, was set on by three Footpads, in the Fields between Stepney Church and Poplar, who beat him in a cruel Manner, and took from him a Silver Watch, six India Handkerchiefs, 8s. and some Halfpence, and made off.——Yesterday Sir John Gonson, Justice De Veil, Justice Cotton, and several other Justices of the Peace for the City and Liberty of Westminster, met at St. Martin's Vestry, and several loose Persons that were apprehended late the Night before, and taken out of the Houses in Coulston Court and Drury-Lane, were brought before them and examin'd; some of them were acquitted, and some of the most notorious were committed to Tothill-Fields Bridewell.

Preferments. Yesterday a Court of Directors of the East-India Company was held at their House in Leadenhall-street, when Mr. Spencer and Mr. Crabe were chosen Joint Pay-masters in the room of Mr. Spencer, deceas'd.

Deaths. Yesterday Morning died the new-born Son and Heir of George Fitzgerald, Esq;——Last Week died Sir William Murray, a Scotch Baronet, who is succeeded in Honour and Estate by his eldest Son, now Sir Archibald Murray, a Youth about 15 Years of Age, now a Student in the University of Glasgow.——Yesterday died at his House in Shoe-Lane, the Rev. Mr. Canon, Minister at Colchester.——On Tuesday last died Mr. Thomas Hudson, Tobacco Merchant on Tower-Hill, and one of the Corn-meeters of this City.——The same Day died at Esher in Surrey, Mr. Nivell, a Wheeler, of the Wounds he received some Nights before from a Groom belonging to Mr. Harvest, a rich Brewer at Kingston, in a Quarrel on the Road between Putney and Kingston: The Groom is fled.——On Monday Night a poor young Woman died in Hampton-Town Round-house, through the Abuses she had met with from some Soldiers, some of whom continued their brutish Usage of her when she was in the Agonies of Death.

FRIDAY, September 24.

Last Night there was a General Meeting of the Managers of the State-Lottery, at the Banquetting-House at Whitehall, when it was agreed that the Wheels with the Tickets in them should be carried to Guildhall on Saturday the 9th of October next, and the Drawing to begin on Monday the 11th following. Mr. Coller from the Bank came to acquaint the Managers, that they had received, on Account of the Tickets deliver'd, 745,000l.

On Monday the 27th Instant the East-India Company's Ship Lethieullier will be paid at their Pay-Office in Leadenhall street.

Their Majesties declared their Intention, in a Drawing-Room last Monday, that they would remove to Richmond the 12th of next Month, and continue there about a Fortnight before they come to St. James's for the Winter.

All the old Works belonging to the Palace at Hampton-Court, are ordered to be pulled down immediately upon the Court's leaving that Place, in order to be rebuilt in a more commodious Manner against next Summer.

This Day the three following Malefactors were executed at Tyburn, viz. Robert Irwin, Richard Davis, and William Tracy.

The following is a true and exact Account of the Misfortune which happened to the Sloop Dolphin and her Company, in her late Voyage from North Carolina for the Island of Montserrat, laden with Provisions and Lumber.

On Thursday Morning, the 24th of June, about half an Hour after Eight, by a sudden Gust or Squall of Wind, the Sloop overset, and, by the nearest Estimation, the Master reckoned himself in the Latitude of 25, 30 N. Lat. and 63, 39 W. Long. Wedrington Rance, one of the Men, was drowned, and the rest of them got on the Side of the Wreck: they had neither Water or Bread, or any Sort of Provisions to subsist on, but the Negro, by often diving into the Wreck, found an Adz and a Hand-Saw; they then cut the Rigging from the Mast, which soon came out, and on Tuesday the 29th of June the Sloop righted, but was full of Water, when they got at some Barrels of Water which were in the Hold, but the Salt Water had got into them, so that they could not drink it. About the same Time they saw two Sail, but could not speak with them, not being able to make a Signal. On the 14th Day after she overset, they got a large Fish, called a Shark, the Blood of which the Men very greedily drank, and eat half the Flesh. They having nothing to drink but their Urine, and what Rain came from the Heavens, one of the Men died for want of Water, as also did the Negro the 17th Day, the Mate the 18th, and another Man on the 19th. On the 15th of July, being the 21st Day after she overset, the Master and Richard Banks were taken up by a French Ship, called the William and Thomas, Capt. John Terrey Commander, the Master being so weak when taken up, that he was not able to stand. After being seven Weeks at Sea, they arriv'd at Havre de Grace, where the French were very charitable, not letting them want for Necessaries, whilst they were there. Capt. Richard Humphreys, Commander of the Charming Betty Snow, gave them their Passage for London, and the Master, Tho. Pilson, still remains on board, being afflicted with the Gout in both his Feet, and in a poor Condition, not able to help himself, but as Capt. Humphreys out of Charity assists him. On Tuesday last Mr. John Praed going on board Capt. Humphreys's Snow, and seeing the Master in so poor and miserable a Condition with the Gout, was so charitable and kind as to offer the Master Accommodation at his House for a Month, till such Time as he might procure himself a Passage home to North Carolina.

A VIEW of the Depredations and Ravages committed by the SPANIARDS, on the BRITISH Trade and Navigation: Moſt humbly offer'd to the Conſideration of the PARLIAMENT of GREAT BRITAIN.

Would not, e'er this, have roll'd his trembling Ports
In Smoaky Ruin? ——
